The New York Times of June 9, 1928, said that as a result of this concession, HAMMER realized 1 1/4 million dollars profit on an invested capital of $1,000,000. He was obligated according to the concession agreement to split his profits 50-50 with the Soviets and pay 7 1/2% tax, but "has the right to export all his ruble profits in foreign valuta at the officially fixed rate of 1 ruble 95 copecks to the dollar and his balance sheet has been approved by the State Accounting Department..... 20% of Dr. Hammer's output is being exported to Turkey, China and Persia. Before Dr. Hammer began production, Russia imported approximately $2,000,000,000 worth of pencils annually. The Concessions Committee proposed that he take a sub-concession for Siberian redwood from Minossek, just north of the border of Chinese Turkestan on liberal terms with special freight rates. Prior to this he used American cedar." One of the terms of the pencil concession was that HAMMER should be allowed to take out of the country all the things he had bought during his stay in Russia. Shortly after his trading corporation was established HAMMER rented a mansion at Sadovaya-Samotechnaya 14, Moscow, which had belonged to a rich clothing manufacturer. It was in the heart of Moscow and surrounded by gardens and high walls.

There was no furniture in this mansion, but VICTOR HAMMER discovered bargains in fine furnishings, china from the china factory of the czar and fine furniture in out of the way shops. They were worried, however, about their accumulation of Russian money because of the exchange rate, but they found the investment of the money in these articles a satisfactory solution to their problem. Among their accumulations was a portion of the czar's crown jewels. This fabulous aggregation of gold plate and jewelry and ceramics had been kept in 30 locked coffers in Leningrad ever since the fall of the House of Romanoff. In the winter of 1924-25 it was brought to Moscow for appraisal. HAMMER, according to the News account, bought about $2,000,000 worth of crown jewels (which were appraised at $500,000,000) which went into the HAMMER collection. When they left Russia in 1931 they took their complete collection with them.

Dr. ARMAND HAMMER lived for a year in Paris and came to the United States in 1932.

Hon. John Edgar Hoover:
Dept of Justice
Washington.

Dear John:

There seem to be some things that are beyond my ken. The enclosed clipping is re: the son a Dr. Armand Hammer, who along with his brother Harry L. Hammer and his father Dr. Armand Hammer, Sr; were closely associated with the Soviet Union under the regimes of Lenin and Stalin. aka "Hiss"

This young Hammer killed a man in 1955 in a drunken brawl, and never came to trial probably because his father was financially able to persuade someone that his action was in self defense. Now he comes along and tries again to kill; or threatens to kill.

The enclosed clipping also states he is working on a secret government project for an aircraft company.

It makes no difference to me whether or not he might be a great scientist or engineer, his family background connections and their association in the past with our "Red" enemy, plus the fact that he killed one man and threatened to kill his wife and others, indicate to me that he is "NUTS", and not the type of man to be trusted with federal secrets.

Out of one hundred and seventy plus million U. S. citizens cannot these contractors of federal secret defense weapons find sane people to do the work...why do they have to risk classified matters to this type of individual. No wonder the enemy can so easily acquire our military secrets.

This young Hammer's grandfather, Dr. Armand Hammer; Sr, was a druggist in Atlantic City, and arrested and convicted for dope peddling.

61-280-192

I know all these things because I have personally kept a lookout for espionage and Communists in this area and I had occasion to check the "morgue files" of the now defunct Los Angeles Daily News a few years ago, which contained the life operations of the Hammar's.

Enclosed is a copy of correspondent's communication. Correspondent enclosed a clipping from the September 17, 1959, issue of the "Los Angeles Herald and Express" indicating Julian Armand Hammer, son of multimillionaire art collector Armand Hammer of New York City, had been jailed for allegedly threatening to shoot his wife and a neighbor. It also indicated that Julian Armand was employed on a secret Government project for an unnamed aircraft firm. Hammer allegedly had been arrested in 1935 for killing a friend.
