Sister-in-Law Of Hitler Starts British-Aid Job

Irish Wife of Der Fuehrer's Half-Brother Glad to Do Her Bit to Defeat Nazis

Mrs. Brigid Elizabeth Hitler, nee Downey, who has been waging a private war against the Hitler family since 1913, joined forces with the Allies yesterday and reported to the British War Relief Society, 730 Fifth Avenue, for her first day's work as a volunteer assistant.

Mrs. Hitler is the wife of Alois Hitler, half-brother and second cousin of the German Fuehrer. She left her husband in 1913 because he beat her, and she bears his name today only because the laws of the Roman Catholic Church forbid divorce.

As for Adolf Hitler, "It's nobody's business what I think of him," Mrs. Hitler said yesterday. "Hanging would be too good for him, and electrocution would be too good for him. He should be killed by slow torture, a little bit every day."

Mrs. Hitler explained the relationship between her husband and the Fuehrer as follows: "Old Adolf, Adolf Hitler's father, married three times. His second wife was Alois's mother, and his third wife was his own first cousin, whose name was also Hitler. Adolf is the son of the third wife. So my husband is his half-brother and his second cousin." This account differs slightly from other available accounts of Adolf Hitler's parentage, which also differ from each other.

Mrs. Hitler told her story to reporters yesterday in a British War Relief Society workroom, between bouts with the photographers. A buxom woman of forty-nine summers, with coal-black hair and smiling eyes, she seemed glad to be doing her bit.

She met Alois Hitler in 1910 at a horse show in Dublin, Ireland, her birthplace, she related. He was a waiter. It was a whirlwind courtship, and in three or four months they agreed to get married. Her father didn't like Hitler. "I won't have any foreigners in my family," he said. So they eloped to London.

Four times in the next three years Mrs. Hitler left her new husband, and three times she went back to him. "I couldn't stand his treatment," she said. "He was very cruel—he was Hitler the second. 'I'll bend you or I'll break you,' he said, and, 'Why, you'll break me, because I'll never bend,' I replied."

Hitler and her boy prospered in England, and the mother worked in the box office of the Olympia Theater in Liverpool and other places. But when their cousin Adolf came to power in Germany in 1933 the name Hitler became unpopular in England and William Patrick couldn't get a job. So he went to Germany and worked there for six years, obtaining a special permit from Uncle Adolf.

"Hitler was very friendly in the beginning," said Mrs. Hitler. "But then he wanted my boy to become a German citizen, and he wouldn't do it. So Hitler began a slow persecution. My son was locked up for two days, but we escaped across the border and came here."

Meanwhile Mrs. Hitler had visited her son in Germany, met Adolf Hitler and seen her husband again. There was nothing particularly unusual about Adolf, she said. As for her husband, he wept bitterly because of the way he had treated her and said, "God had extracted a terrible punishment from him." She found he had taken another wife after obtaining a divorce in the German courts.

Mrs. Hitler said she had applied to the Pope for a dispensation to enable her to obtain an annulment of her marriage to Alois Hitler and resume her maiden name, Brigid Downey. She would like also to become a naturalized American citizen, she said.

MEMORANDUM

RE: WILLIAM PATRICK HITLER

ALL INFORMATION CONTAINED
HEREIN IS UNCLASSIFIED
DATE 12/19/85 BY 9145/CE/TC

Under date of September 24, 1939, the newspaper "Wichita Beacon", Wichita, Kansas, published an article stating that William Patrick Hitler is the son of Alois Hitler, the half-brother of Adolf Hitler. This article related that William Hitler's mother is of Irish descent and that he was born and educated in England. It stated that three years after the wedding of Alois Hitler and William Hitler's mother, Alois Hitler deserted William's mother and went to Germany where he married again without divorcing her, and that William Hitler was the only son of their marriage.

This article stated that William Hitler first saw Adolf Hitler in 1929 at a Nazi rally in Nuremberg, Germany, where he had gone to visit his father. He had stormy relations with Adolf Hitler who, for political reasons, at first denied they were blood relations. When William Hitler published articles at his father's request to correct certain misstatements about his family, Hitler summoned him and his father to his hotel and in a hysterical interview threatened to kill him if anything more were published concerning his family affairs.

After several trips to Germany, William Hitler went there in October, 1933, shortly after Adolf Hitler had seized power. Hitler aided him in various ways to establish himself in the Third Reich, evidently hoping that his nephew would obey his commands and integrate himself in the Nazi regime. However, when William Hitler did neither, Adolf Hitler began a petty persecution of his disobedient relative making it difficult and finally intolerable for him to live in Germany. This article stated that Adolf Hitler ominously threatened William Hitler in their final interview in which he paced back and forth holding in his hands a horsehide whip. The article further stated that in February, 1939, William Hitler left Germany and came to the United States with his mother; that he was presently writing a book about his experiences in Germany in addition to lecturing, and that numerous attempts have been made to keep him silent.

This article reflected that William Hitler was to speak before a Men's Dinner at the Allis Hotel on October 24, 1939, in the place of Boake Carter who could not appear and that he would present a startling story of the real Germany "hidden behind Nazi fictions." (61-7560-2770X3)

The Washington Times Herald of October 29, 1939, carried an article to the effect that William Patrick Hitler, nephew of Germany's Chancellor, Adolf Hitler, would lecture on November 10, 1939, at the Masonic Auditorium, 13th and New York Avenues, N. W., his subject being "What the German People Are Thinking Today." His lecture was to be sponsored by the T. Arthur Smith Bureau. This article reflected that William Patrick Hitler was born in Liverpool, England, in 1911, his mother being of Irish descent and his father being Adolf Hitler's brother.

(61-7560-3530X2)

A pamphlet published reflected that on March 3, 1940, William Patrick Hitler was to speak before the Y.M.C.A. Greater Sunday Meetings in the Auditorium at Coatesville, Pennsylvania. This article stated that William Patrick Hitler is the son of Adolf Hitler's half-brother, Alois, and that his mother is of Irish descent. It further stated that he was born and educated in England; that he went to Germany in 1933, a Nazi idealist, but that he quit Germany six years later completely disillusioned. This article also related that William Patrick Hitler had close personal relations with Goering, Goebbels, Himmler, and others.

Another circular reflected that William Patrick Hitler, nephew of Adolf Hitler, would deliver a speech at the Men's League of the Marble Collegiate Church, 1 West 29th Street, New York City, on November 11, 1941, at which time he would explain the mystery of Rudolf Hess.

N. C. PRISON SETUP HAS LARGE DEFICIT

Prince Says He Isn't Worried Over Fact Department Incurred By $212,266

RALEIGH, Dec. 6.—The State Prison department incurred a deficit of $212,266 during the first four months of the fiscal year, but Chairman Ben Prince of the Highway and Public Works commission said today that he wasn't worried about it.

"The book figures for such an isolated interval are meaningless and do not represent a true deficit," Prince declared.

Through October 31, the Prison department showed an overdraft averaging $1,700 a day, and if the department continues to operate at the same rate, the deficit would be about $200,000 at the end of the fiscal year.

Prince said, however, that the department had participated in shortages of material and rising prices and had purchased huge quantities of goods and at the same time increases in the value of products on hand will exceed by many thousands of dollars the book deficit.

"In other words, if the department had bought only current needs, there would be no book deficit," Prince continued. "The question is whether the Prison department is being efficiently and economically operated—and I know it is."

The Highway commission chairman added, however, that although there is no "real deficit" now, several factors may combine to create a deficit by the end of the year. This deficit probably would be "serious" and will not approach the figure indicated by the present rate of operations.

If there is a deficit, Prince said, it would be met either by increasing the Highway department's appropriation of $1 a day for a prisoner's work on the roads, or by a direct allocation of highway funds to the Prison department.

To current legends then current about the Fuehrer's background, Patrick and his father issued a number of stories in which they presented the legal story of the family, and the two brought to his office, and in an interview marked by the usual hysterics of the world's number one psychopath threatened his relatives if further publicity were given to their kinship.

For the next six years young Hitler worked at various occupations in Germany, but his every act and word were carefully recorded, and he was required to report to his unofficial guardians, Rudolf Hess and Ernst Wilhelm Bohle, who headed the fifth column activities of Germans abroad. Whenever Patrick Hitler came within an ace of making a business name for himself, he was informed that the Fuehrer objected and his career abruptly came to an end.

The Fuehrer's nephew will lecture on "My Uncle Adolf" in his appearance here.

From Stephen and Evelyn.
 She parted her car and waded through the snow to the doorway, knocked quickly. For a moment there was silence inside the cabin, then a man's footsteps approached the door. A moment later she was looking into the amazed eyes of Richard Thorpe.
 "Well, this is a surprise!" He stepped back as she came into the warmly lighted room and closed the door behind her. Her quick glance took in the richness of the furnishings, the comfort of shaded lamps and glowing fire. She saw a few law books scattered on a small table before the hearth, but Adela was nowhere to be seen.
 "I'm sure I've no idea to what I owe the honor of this visit," Thorpe said, his eyes lighting at sight of her clear, fresh beauty. "And now that you're here you must let me take your wraps and give you a drink to warm you!"
 "Thank you," she said curtly. "I shan't stay, I've come for Adela."
 He raised his brows. "Adela? But surely you know the lady's here!"
 "I don't believe you! I have to laugh aloud, mockingly, at your being a Girl Scout and rescuing her from the cruel clutches of a worthless scoundrel, uh? Well, my advice to you, my dear, is to let Adela go her own merry way to hell! She's emb-wave of hate filled her being.

 A shaft of cold air pierced the room and Richard Thorpe released her so abruptly that she almost fell. They turned to see Stephen Curt standing in the doorway, his face a white mask, his eyes hard, his mouth grim. A breath caught, her heart turning over within her, and right then and there all hope vanished. No one—not even Stephen Curt with his understanding—could be expected to forgive or forget the scene just witnessed.
 "It was Richard Thorpe who re-covered and spoke first," Wall, Steve, I wasn't expecting you tonight!"
 Stephen's lip curled. "Evidently not."
 "I suppose it's useless to say I wasn't expecting Diana, who's Diana sharply. You'll cope with me at once!"
 Her voice sounded strange and far away. "Of course, Stephen."
 He opened the door and she followed him out into the snow. "You'll leave your car and come back with me," he said roughly, and without a word she followed him.
 As he set her into the car, his face shining in the light of the dashboard which he had not waited to turn off. A look of such hurt and disappointment was on his features that Diana almost cried out. "I don't believe you'd be honest! I trusted you that much!" he said bitterly.
 Diana sat stunned. Who had told him she'd be at Richard's lodges? Who told Adela it had all been a plot to elope with Stephen's eyes? Adela had not been able to stand the sight of Stephen's resentment. In Diana's mind the sure Stephen's belief in Diana's apparent liaison with Thorpe as a cloak to any more."

 Self-conservation experts came to spread the gospel of saving the people to terrace their hillside for her own nefarious actions. Now Stephen would never believe anything Diana might tell him about her, Adela. And Esie! Part of the plot, too, of course! Esie wouldn't hesitate to lie for Adela, evidently.
 And what would Diana do or say? Nothing would expose the intrigue that involved Adela and Richard and Evelyn Thorpe. And as Adela had foreseen, no one would believe her now! Besides, if she spoke now, the whole purpose of this mad night's trip would be destroyed.
 They drove silently through the night until they reached the porch of the house in Green Street. Then Stephen said wearily, "I must remind you again, Diana, that you are still my wife and that I have a certain position to maintain. Also, you've made a bargain which you must live up to. And nothing must appear any different to the outside world."
 Diana's heart ached. "I demand! Do you understand?"
 "Yes, Stephen," she said softly, heart-brokenly, and climbed out of the car and went into the quiet house.
 As she climbed the stairs to her room, and in the doorway met a sleepy-eyed Adela. It did not occur to her even to wonder why Adela had decided to come home after all. Nothing could ever surprise her again, she felt.
 "So sorry, my dear," Diana said. Adela asked, smiling ruefully, "Yes, do choose the best night to run around in!"
 Diana felt herself written up in cold, helpless fury. Adela could not feel so complacently triumphant if she knew how her precious Richard had made love to Diana. With a kind of numb excitement, Diana felt she could not hope to cope with a girl who would even use the man she was apparently in love with to gain her own ends.
 "You wouldn't know where I've been, I suppose?" "Should I?" Adela shrugged. "Your brother is satisfied that I'm a liar and a cheat. That's what you wanted, wasn't it?"
 "I don't know what you're talking about!" Flashes of fury darted along Diana's spine. "Then perhaps you'll understand that I love Stephen Curt and I'm going to fight for him! What do you think of that?"
 A sneer crossed Adela's face. "Do you really think you'll win?" Diana drooped suddenly, her eyes filled with tears, all defiance was gone. "Perhaps not," she admitted. "For you won't hesitate to lie and steal and perjure yourself to get what you want. But," with a flash of intensity, "even you can't keep me from loving him with all my heart!"
 (To Be Continued)

Gowder saved the down payment on a 100-acre farm. Then he married Mamie McDonald, a neighbor's daughter, and she came to help him.
 They built a little home on a knoll above a spring, built a barn, and cleared timber from part of the land.
 The neighbors laughed at this fisherman who refused to clear the land by burning the grass and underbrush. They called him a "trashy farmer" because he used a sharp-pointed Georgia bull-tongue spooter plow which broke the subsoil without turning the land.
 That ploughing without turning the soil is one of the recent land-saving developments of the group, and not putting anything back," he says. "You can't do that to the land. Because when the land washes away, then the people will leave."

 "They don't want to work hard enough. They think they can farm in the summer and go to town to work in the winter, but you've got to stay with the land 12 months in the year. I need 15 months each year to take care of mine and then I can't do all I want to do."
 Gowder always has some cotton, peas, pigs, corn, wheat, oats, or chickens to sell to bring in the little cash needed. The family rarely buys anything except clothing, coffee and sugar.

draw two rounds of trumps, and led the club king. West won with the ace of clubs and led another spade, South ruffing once more.

Declarer now cashed the two high clubs and led the jack of diamonds. West covered with the queen, and now South had to lose two diamonds for a one-trick set.

The reader is cautioned not to jump to the conclusion that the lead of the jack of diamonds is necessarily wrong. True, a real double-diamond is impossible for lack of the nine-spot. The holding will yield two tricks if either player has both honors (East would be caught in an end-play if he had both honors) or if one player has only a doubleton honor.
 If East had K-x or Q-x in diamonds, the lead of the jack would be correct, for if West ducked, the ace-ten would be left for a second finesse; and if West covered, dummy would take the ten and require a new diamond, setting up the ten.

But it was practically impossible for West to have four diamonds when he had bid spades and followed to two rounds of trumps and three rounds of clubs.
 The better chance was that East had four diamonds and West only two.

South would have made his contract had he led a low diamond for a finesse of dummy's ten. East would have taken the king, but then the queen would drop under dummy's ace to get up South's jack.

Miss Isabelle Lorek, sister of the bridegroom, played Wagner's Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin and sang "Ave Maria" during the ceremony. John Lorek, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas J. Banyas, of Harrisville, was attired in an Eleanor blue velvet frock with matching accessories and wore a corsage of pink roses.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Lorek of Carle Haynes, is a graduate of New Hanover High school. He received his B.S. degree in pharmacy at the University of North Carolina, and is now employed by Saunders Drug store.

MARIAN MARTIN
Pattern 9148

Larger women often have difficulty in finding a housecoat that is attractive yet slenderizing. Let Pattern 9148 by Marian Martin solve that problem for you. It has that front buttoning, a look for to give you narrow lines—the skirt panel in front conceals the effect and is repeated in back. So does the V neck and the unusual collar with the tiny bow below it. You may make the collar of contrast in clever trick to flatter your complexion, and perhaps the cuffs on the short sleeves too. A long sleeve is attractive when you make this dress in wool or crepe. Also don't forget the optional wrist-length sleeves. They are to match the collar and cuffs.

Pattern 9148 may be made in 14 in. misses' and 16 in. misses' sizes. It is made in 35, 37, 39, 41, 43, 45, 47, 49, 51, 53, 55, 57, 59, 61, 63, 65, 67, 69, 71, 73, 75, 77, 79, 81, 83, 85, 87, 89, 91, 93, 95, 97, 99, 101, 103, 105, 107, 109, 111, 113, 115, 117, 119, 121, ...the plans of a ... promotional organizer. There was no advance prospectus or blueprint of a proposed organization.
The Church definitely grew out of an experience. It was not a matter of organization awaiting or developing life; it was life leading to organization.

Jesus in one sense was the founder of the Church, but in another sense its foundation exists after He had left the earthly scene. Although Jesus did not formally organize the Church, there was more organization associated with His ministry than is commonly supposed. He gathered about Him the apostles, to whom were committed special privileges and responsibilities, and with whom He

the Gospel that He had brought to man. We sing today "The Church's one foundation is Jesus Christ her Lord," and that is sentiment thoroughly true to the New Testament in its account of the origin of the Christian Church.

The Church, as I have said, had its origin in the experiences of the new life. More definitely, it began as these experiences found expression in the remarkable events of the Day of Pentecost. Here, as the disciples were gathered together in one place, there came a strong outpouring of spiritual power. Peter, who formerly had denied his Lord, preached with great boldness and courage about the reality

The Yankee King Will Be Staged Friday Evening At Local High School

High school plays and has appeared in a number of the English presentation.

Revolution, family disputes, clandestine love affairs, conspiracy, and murder play important roles in this comedy. For Pa Hinkle, an American citizen from Clinton, Ohio, discovers he is heir to the throne of Laurania, a hidden city in Europe. His wife, Ma Hinkle, and his daughter, Ma Jean, accompany him to his inherited kingdom, on the condition that their home in Laurania be exactly like their home in Clinton.

Ma Hinkle (played by Harry Hald McGowan) almost causes Pa Hinkle (Gobby Smith) to lose his head, by bespeaking Mr. Mackin, whose part is taken by Betty Faye Allen, is in love on the O. L. with Wayne Henry Gillet, who is an aviator and of whom Ma does not approve.

Laurania custom has it that a boy loses a girl he is suddenly engaged to but, since he is in the army, this is quite a complication when Wilbur Gray (played by Gleason Allen), younger brother of Mackin, and who is the way, is not in the army, kisses Julie (played by Mary Norma Levine) daughter of the town's chief conspirator against Pa Hinkle. The goddess is played by Margaret Smith. The engagement of Wilbur to Julie sets off the beginning of the revolution in the country of Laurania, during which an attempt is made on Pa Hinkle's life.

"The Yankee King" has never been produced professionally, but it has had several test performances, namely, once at Trinity High school, Washington, Pa., and twice at Carnegie Institute of Technology. These three performances proved to be hits.

Committees have been appointed for the production, with Elizabeth Williams, chairman of ticket sales; Katherine Goodman, chairman of publicity; Juliette Robertson, chairman of properties; Katharine Thomas, prompter; Barbara Marshall, agitator; Thomas Phillips, sound effects; and Tennis Finch, chairman of make-up.

Novel Scottie, or New Scotland, received its name 150 years before there was a Scot there.
